CONFERENCE VENUE

3 October – State Tretyakov Gallery
4–5 October – Atlas Park Hotel

Working languages – English and Russian

In a world increasingly being shaped by digital technologies, the traditional guardian institutions (libraries, archives and museums) are challenged to keep pace with the rapid growth in information. They also face a new challenge – as technology advances the stability and lifespan of documents is considerably decreasing. If nothing is done, many important documents in electronic format will not survive or will become completely inaccessible within a very short time. The result will be a permanent loss to the collective memory of humankind. This challenge needs to be tackled urgently and the costs of preserving digital information should not be underestimated – these far exceed the preservation costs experienced to date with five millennia of traditional document.

Strategic Plan for the UNESCO Information for All Programme

UNESCO INFORMATION FOR ALL PROGRAMME (IFAP)

IFAP was established by UNESCO to provide a framework for international cooperation and partnerships in building an inclusive information society. IFAP is aimed at ensuring to all people universal access to information that might be used for improving their quality of life. IFAP Intergovernmental Council comprising 26 Member States is elected to guide the Programme in its planning and implementation. IFAP goal is to assist the development of national information policies framework. Five IFAP priority lines of action are information accessibility, information preservation, information literacy, information ethics and information for development.
